Course Description

This is the NTU micro seminar that invites speakers to present their current research. For the latest seminar schedule, please check the department web page:

http://www.econ.ntu.edu.tw/zh\_tw/Events\_Journal/sememea0/semmicro

The goal of this course is to expose students to the research frontier in the fields of microeconomics. Students are expected to actively participate in most of the presentations.

Grades

The grades for this course will be assigned according to two criteria: (1) Written Introduction, and (2) Participation and Feedback to Other's Introduction.

1. Written Introduction (導讀, 70%): Read one of the seminar papers before the seminar, write a one-page report, and submit it three days prior to the seminar (i.e. Monday). On this one-page report, you should write a short summary (less than 500 words) that briefly answers the following questions:
  - (a) What is the question (of the paper)?
  - (b) Why should we care about it?
  - (c) What is your (or the author's) answer?
  - (d) How did you (or the author) get there?

In addition, to illustrate “why we should care about it”, you should provide one real world example the results of this paper can be applied to on the back page, plus a list of common notation used (theory) or regression variables (empirical study) throughout the paper so people can easily refer to during the talk.

Note: Your introduction need not be in the same language as the paper (and doing it in a different language is the best way to avoid plagiarizing).

2. Participation and Feedback (30%): Students are expected to attend most of the presentations, ask questions or give comments during them. In addition, after reading each week's introduction and attending the seminar, you are to evaluate how helpful the introduction was for understanding the actual talk by giving numerical scores and written feedback. Please remember to do your feedback evaluation on the Google Doc immediately after each seminar (no later than Sunday).
3. If you cannot attend any of the presentation due to medical reasons, you should inform me as soon as possible and you need to write an additional report about the paper after watching the recorded video.
